\ – VIVIAN MAIER – THE SECRET LIFE of VIVIAN MAIER, world-renowned street photographer who left no trace of her life after her death in 2009. Vivian Maier seems to have lived a secret life before her sudden and mysterious death. She would come home from the store with blank film for her camera and never took it out of the house. She stopped taking pictures in 2010, but the only way to find out why was to look into the life of the woman. What I uncovered is not a normal life story, but rather a completely strange and mysterious. I've seen life through a single camera lens for over a year. When I first met Vivian Maier I had no idea who she was, but after more than a year of living and working with her, it becomes clear that she has chosen her path and has no plans to change it. The story starts back in 1954, when Vivian was 12 years old. Her father was an Italian-American serviceman, who had spent much of his childhood in Japan, where he had been stationed. As a child, Vivian spent some years with her grandmother in California. After her parents divorced, Vivian went with her mother to Washington, D.C., where her mother got a job as a secretary for an architect. Vivian was put in a regular school, where she felt out of place. She wanted to escape to live with her grandmother, who was more similar to her. But the adult world offered no way out, and so Vivian remained stuck in a state of tension and suffering until she died. The one way for her to leave the world behind was to take pictures. I haven't seen Vivian's apartment for two months. She has been there and taken all of her pictures, but she never showed them to anyone. It was her way of trying to run away from her family. Her grandmother did not approve of Vivian taking pictures, so Vivian was forced to sneak into her neighbors' windows with her borrowed film. The old gentleman lives in a beautiful wooden house. I come in through the window, but I do it in such a way that I don't break anything. I take the picture, go out and quickly close the window. I must not allow them to see what I've done. The old gentleman knows that I've been taking pictures. I start to feel really 82157476af
